Excerpt from The Works of Plato Abridgd, Vol. 1 of 2: With an Account of His Life, Philosophy, Morals, and Politicks, Together With a Translation of His Choicest Dialogues in Two Volumes

Is it then to be wonderd at that Philosophy is mil-taken and neglected, and that Men no longer pay her that respect and veneration, which she formerly excited in their Minds? Ashamd of being confounded with the Daughters of the Earth, she is reascended to Heaven, from whence Socrates broughtThe Athenians heretofore by a publick decree forbad, that the Names of Harmodius, and Aristogiton, who had deliverd their Countrey from the Tyranny of hippias and Hipparchus, mould ever be given to Slaves: for they thought it a horrible Indignity by so shameful a Communication to blast thole Names that were devoted to the publick Liberty. Philosophy is another Deliverer, she triumphs over Vices, overthrows Impiety, and confounds the Wisdom of the World. Tis somewhat greater than the Arts, and than what Men commonly call the Sciences; tis the love of true Wisdom, the knowledg of Divine and Humane Things, that is to say, the Science of God, a Science which teaches us to know the relation which our Souls necessarily bear to their Creator, and by and in him, to all rational Creatures, and which produces the certain knowledge of all our Duties, towards God, our Neighbours and our Selves.
